Two or three days ago members of the Administrative Board were riding along the smooth paving of Grove Avenue in their new $4.000 motor ear. City Engineer Boiling had driven out to look over the grading of Cary Street and came logging along in bis old buggs. He stopped to talk for a few minutes about improvements under way in that part of the city. He suggested that the board get off the smooth paving for a while and look over some other streets, especially Main Street west of Vine, where faulty street car construction has caused the roadbed to give way. Members of the hoard became conscious that there was a contrast between the spick-and-span newness of the $1,000 automobile and the old buggy, the top of which was discarded after rats had made a nest in it. Yesterday the board apportioned $150 to buy a new buggy for the personal use of the City Engineer.
